The characters from around the world in this shorts collection have stories to tell and to pass along. In "The Other Side", Annie and Clover share a new friendship during Segregation, one quiet conversation at a time. In "Show Way" we learn of the 'Trails to the North', the Underground Railroad paths that could lead a family to freedom embroidered as patterns in quilts, a legacy passed down for generations. In the delightful documentary "Calling Quilombola", children in rural and urban Brazil trade observations about their lives, via "telephone". And in "Mwansa the Great", a brother and sister have vivid imaginations nurtured by memories of their father. Whether a story is embroidered, written, or oral – everyone has a tale to tell!
